Locating an article that you previously found in ProQuest ABI/Inform Complete.

From the Advanced Search screen, type the title of the article; then select Document title-TI from the drop-down menu.

From the results list, select the publication you want. To avoid retrieving more than one search result, you could have entered the publication title in the second search box above and then selected Publication title from the drop-down menu on the right.

If you only know the publication title and the date, you can use the Publication tab located at the top of the search page.
Enter the title of the publication in the search box.

Click on the first link, the publication title. Keep opening up the date ranges by clicking on the plus signs until you get to the date you are looking for. You can also search within the publication by entering the title or as much of it as you know.

If you are not sure of the publication date, you can enter the title or as much of it as you know in the Search box.

Click on the + signs to open the contents until you get to the date you need.
